Debility

Perhaps you eat enough, yet you do not get much benefit from your food. You keep thin and weak; are tired all the time, and your nerves are in a bad way. Why not strengthen your digestion and get rid of your debility?

Read these words from Mrs. E. G. Munro, of Colong, Victoria. Mrs. Munro also sends her photograph.
"I suffered greatly with indigestion and debility for a long time. Sleep did not refresh me, and I was in a very bad state. One of my friends strongly recommended Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after a good deal of hesitation I made up my mind to try it. To my great surprise, I had not taken one-half a bottle before I felt greatly improved in every way. I only took three bottles, and I can now honestly say that I am entirely free from all of my old troubles, and consider myself perfectly cured. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is certainly a wonderful blood medicine."

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

There are many imitation Sarsaparillas. Be sure you get Ayer's.

DETAILS SHOCKING TRAGEDY

A REPORT WHICH DESCRIBES THE WORST MASSACRE OF MISSIONARIES IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC—HOW THE GERMAN CATHOLIC MISSION IN BEINING MOUNTAIN WAS SUDDENLY ATTACKED AND THE PRIESTS, BROTHERS AND NUNS SLAUGHTERED.

The last number of Von Kuhlows German Trade Review gives the following details of a massacre of missionaries on an island near Australia, declaring the tragedy to have been the worst known in the Pacific:

On Saturday morning, August 13, the missionaries at the Catholic station, St. Paul, in the Beining Mountain, rose at their usual hour, 5 o'clock and after Mass and Holy Communion went about their ordinary evocations. The natives approached the convent carrying clubs and axes, but no notice was taken of this. Suddenly Tomari advanced along the veranda, carrying a gun. Glancing through the window, he saw Father Rascher on his bed. He instantly thrust the weapon through the window and taking aim, fired. The shot lodged in the priest's chest. Father Rascher sprang to his feet and staggered from the room, where he met Sister Hannah, who, seeing his guncocked and dripping with blood caught hold of him to give the dying man support. Tomari, seeing that his first shot had not killed his victim, followed through the room and fired another shot into his right side.

The priest fell dead into the terrified Sister's arms. Sister Hannah then ran into the dining-room and locked the door. At the report of the gun, which was a prearranged signal for the massacre, the other missionaries were instantly attacked by other natives standing by them and tomahawked. Tomari, having shot the Father, instantly left the house with the intention of shooting Brother Bley, who was doing carpentering work beneath the house. The unfortunate missionary, hearing the shot fired, put his head in the house, and seeing the Sisters struck down, made a run for the bush with the intention to escape. He had not gone many yards, Tomari following him, when he turned round and faced the murderer. One of the mission boys, seeing the situation, threw himself in front of the Brother and cried, "Tomari, you must not shoot the Brother. You can shoot me, but let the Brother go," to which the murderer replied, "Fool, stand aside, or I shall kill both of you." The gallant boy Tande refused to move, and the murderer was preparing to shoot, but, loth to lose a cartridge on a native when there were white men to shoot, he signed to some natives, who approached the Brother from behind, and with a terrible blow with an axe felled him to the ground. Then Tomari advanced to the dying man and fired a bullet into his head, scattering his brains around. Tande stood by helpless, and then bolted for the bush. He reached Vunamemat station safely with a report of the massacre.

Tomari, who was apparently the leader, then returned to the house and commanded the natives to break down the door, behind which Sister Hannah had taken refuge. A few blows from axes and the door was in pieces. Sister Hannah was seen kneeling beneath the table in an attitude of prayer. The brute lifted his rifle, shot her in the side and she fell to the floor. Brother Plaschaert was struck by the native Tangam such a terrible blow with an axe as almost to sever his head from his body. Brother Sellekens, who was doing cement work on the church steps also met death with a blow from an axe that laid his head open. Sister Sofia was returning from the village with medicine in her hands, which a blow from a club caused her to drop. Then she instantly faced her murderers and fought with the courage of despair for her life. A tomahawk blow laid open her face, and Tomari, seeing her still alive and struggling, called out: "Why is that woman still alive? Kill her." At once one savage, swinging a sharp, full-sized axe round his head, rushed on the doomed nun and struck her a blow which cut clean through her habit and clothes, and laid her side open. The fiends then rushed on her, cut her head into pieces, and danced around her dead body.

Sister Angela was dusting the altar candlestick, when her murderer rushed into the church and held her down. The receptacle containing the Blessed Sacrament was taken down and placed in mockery beside the head of the murdered nun. Sister Angela was dragged on to the veranda of the convent and hacked to death, her head and body being terribly mutilated. Those told off to kill Sisters Dorothea, Bridgetta, and Miss McDonald said they could not find their intended victims. Fortunately, these women had left St. Paul's for Vunamemat to get provisions, and so escaped with their lives.

Father Vanderatt, when the news was brought to him by the natives to Hermann at Vunamemat did not believe it. He at once mounted his pony and galloped away to St. Paul's. When he reached there his worst fears were confirmed. An Irishman named Thomas Goff, living at Beining, got together some natives, and armed with a rifle, attempted to remove the bodies. He got away that of Father Rascher, but was warned by Tomari not to attempt to go there any more, as they intended to kill the white men, including Governor Hahl and Bishop Couper.

The murderers on Saturday afternoon attacked the residence of Herr Heisterfeldt, manager of the Mossave Plantation, Beining, but they were repulsed, and Heisterfeldt and 50 of his Bouka boys went over to guard Vunamemat. Nothing occurred during the night and the body of Father Rascher, attired in priestly vestments, was laid in the church. At 6 o'clock on Sunday morning the alert Bouka men gave the alarm that a large body of natives were secretly approaching the station. Messrs. Goff, Heisterfeldt, Father Vanderatt, and Brother Mathias, grasping rifles, rushed out, just as the natives began in dead silence to attack. The natives made a determined attack, but under a heavy rifle fire and the valiant defence of the Bouka men they retired. At 7:30 while Father Vanderatt was celebrating a Mass for the repose of the souls of the murdered ones, a thousand natives, pouring out of the bush, made for the station, but were again driven back by the determined white men. At 8:30 a grave was dug in the middle of the church, and the body of Father Rascher was laid to rest. The bodies of the eight victims were subsequently buried in one large grave.

The avenging police marched to the station of Father Rutten, which was further inland. There was no sign of life about the place, but on the veranda, in a canvas chair, was seen a pool of blood, and lying beside it was a book, entitled "The Martyrs of the Catacombs." It was evident that the victim had been murdered while sitting reading the book. Eventually the body was found with its head split in twain, and partially buried in the loose earth and leaves. The burial ceremony was read, and Father Rutten laid to rest on a lonely grave beside the church he had with his own hands erected. The house and church had been stripped.

FIGHT ENDS IN A MURDER

FATAL STABBING AFFRAY AT IWILEI LAST NIGHT AS END OF DRUNKEN BOUT BY JAPANESE.

Suyemoto a Japanese, was killed last night in a room at Iwilei, during the course of a fight. Koseki a Japanese hack driver, is thought to have killed the man and the police were searching for him last night.

The two men in company with other Japanese, met in the room of Miyamoto on the second story of a long building in the tendorin district of Iwilei. There was considerable drinking. Finally Suyemoto and Koseki disagreed about some thing and got to fighting, the latter striking Suyemoto over the forehead with a bottle, causing a gash. The men were separated.

When the liquor gave out Miyamoto claims that he left to secure some more. He says that on his return he found Suyemoto lying dead with pools and stains of blood about the room. It was a wound in the neck, where the jugular vein was severed and another big gash in the stomach was found on the body of the dead man.

The dead man was clad in only an undershirt. In the room was a blood stained kimono and a pall of water where the murderer had evidently washed his hands. No knife was found in the room.

Other Japanese claimed to have also left the room and not to have been present when the fighting occurred. A couple of Porto Rican women stated that they had heard two men scuffling about the room and out on the veranda. According to the statements of the Japs, Koseki appears to have been last with the murdered man. Furuta stated that he found early this morning a pair of bloody socks and drawers belonging to Koseki. In his Furuta's rooms shortly after the tragedy is supposed to have occurred. Koseki disappeared. He is thought to have tried to throw suspicion on Furuta.

The murdered man was an important witness against Hayashida who was recently sentenced to twenty years for killing a Japanese at Wailua. It was suggested that perhaps the murder last night might have been the outcome of Suyemoto having testified against the convicted man.

Deputy Sheriff Rawlins, in company with Chester Doyle, conducted an all night investigation of the affair.

HUIHUI WAS LOOKING.

Bill Hulhui the well known lightweight champion prize fighter, was charged by the police today with having been present where a game of "craps" was in progress. Hulhui appears to have been merely passing and stopped a few moments to see the cause of the crowd. His friends say his alibi will be perfect.
